

COGNITIVE BEHAVIORAL THERAPY (CBT) – SESSION 14

Reviewing Long-Term Maintenance & Preparing for Termination

Fictional Educational Example — Full Detailed

SESSION INFORMATION

Client: RK (35 y/o Male)

Therapist: Dr. A.

Session #: 14 of 16

Focus: Long-term maintenance + Preparing for termination

PRE-SESSION THERAPIST NOTES

Client continues to show strong, stable progress. Belief in the old perfectionistic thought remains low (~20%). He has been actively using his Maintenance Plan. Today we will review his long-term maintenance commitments, continue preparing for termination, review recent experiments, and help him feel confident about becoming fully independent after the final two sessions.

SESSION START & HOMEWORK REVIEW

Therapist: Good morning, RK. How has your week been? Let's start by reviewing your Maintenance Plan and the commitments you wrote last week.

Client: It was a steady week. I've been using the balanced belief and Worry Postponement regularly. I also did the maintenance experiment — I shared an idea in a meeting without over-preparing, and it went well. I wrote down my three long-term commitments as homework.

Therapist: Excellent. Can you tell me what the three commitments are?

Client: 1. Continue using my Coping Card and Action Plan whenever I notice early warning signs. 2. Do one maintenance behavioral experiment every month even after therapy ends. 3. Review my balanced belief and Maintenance Plan once a month for the first 6 months.

Therapist: Those are very clear and realistic. I especially like that you included monthly maintenance experiments — that's a great way to keep the learning alive.

LONG-TERM MAINTENANCE DISCUSSION

Therapist: As we get very close to the end, I want to make sure you feel fully confident about managing on your own. What concerns, if any, do you still have about life after therapy ends?

Client: I think the main thing is just making sure I don't slowly slip back into old patterns without noticing. Like, what if I start over-preparing again without realizing it?

Therapist: That's a very valid concern. One of the best protections against that is having regular "check-ins" with yourself. For example, once a month, you can ask yourself: "Am I still using my tools? Have any early warning signs returned?" Many people find that simple monthly self-check very effective.

Client: That sounds doable. I can put a reminder in my calendar.

Therapist: Perfect. And remember, you also have the booster sessions scheduled. Those will be additional safety nets.

HOMEWORK ASSIGNMENT

Therapist: For this week:

1. Continue daily diary + Worry Time / Postponement
2. Practice using your Maintenance Plan and Coping Card
3. Do one maintenance behavioral experiment
4. Write down your plan for monthly self-check-ins (what questions you will ask yourself)

SESSION SUMMARY & FEEDBACK

Therapist: Today we reviewed your excellent long-term maintenance plan and talked about how to stay on track after therapy ends. You're taking this very seriously in the best way. How are you feeling about the final two sessions?

Client: I feel ready, but I'll miss the regular space. At the same time, I'm also looking forward to seeing how I manage with the tools I have now.

Therapist: That mix of readiness and slight nervousness is completely normal. Any questions?

Client: No, I'm clear.

POST-SESSION THERAPIST NOTES

- Client demonstrating excellent long-term thinking and self-management.
- Maintenance Plan and monthly self-check-in plan are clear and realistic.
- Belief in old core thought remains low and stable.
- Next session (15): Final review of all tools, deeper relapse prevention work, prepare for termination session (16).

Disclaimer: This is a completely fictional but realistic simulation created solely for educational and AI training purposes. It does not represent any real person or therapy.